Gutenberg's Press.—We read in the German journals that a large piece of wood, supposed to have belonged to a p. inting press in the possession of Gutenberg, was discovered the other day at Mayence by some workmen digging a new cellar in the mainston called "Zoud Jagen," the first printing-house of Gutenberg. The beam seems to have formed the head of the press, and contains the socket in which the spindle revolved. The letters J. G. and the date 1441 are cut in one part of it.

Brooks, L. Bradish, and others, A series of appropriate resolutions were offered by Mr. Evarts, in which the assault was characterized, in the language of Seantor Wilson, as brutal, murderous and cowardly, and calling on the House to expel, immediately and unconditionally, from the Heuse, Mr. Brooks. The resolutions were supported by Daniel Lord, Charles King, E. D. Morgan, John A. Stephens, President of the Commercial Bank, and H. W. Beecher. The buttlen of the speeches were that party feeling among the patriotic and union looing men of the North, must henceforth besunk; and a united effort made to average the datardly assault on Mr. Sumner. Enthusiasm ran very high and the crowd was so great that an otatide meeting had to be organized, and the proceedidgs were of a like character as those inside.
